what a comfort it is to have ready at hand a remedy that never fails to relieve Constipation, and that, without pain or discomfort, and almost immediately cures headaches, and dispels every symptom of Dyspepsia. Such a remedy is found in Simmons Liver Regulator—not a sweetened compound to nauseate, or an intoxicating beverage to cultivate an alcoholic appetite, but a medicine pleasant to the taste, and perfectly harmless when given to the smallest child. S. L. R. never disappoints. It possesses the virtues and perfections of a reliable remedy of the kind endorsed by eminent physicians.

"It affords me pleasure to add my testimony to those who receive annually in reference to your valuable medicine. I consider Simmons Liver Regulator the best family medicine on the market. I have prescribed it with excellent results."

Farmers and Education.

It is not so long since farmers, and gardeners, too, for that matter, objected to give any assistance in the compilation of official statistics. They had a wholesome dread of fresh or of increased taxation. They did not realize that the information obtained could be used for any but oppressive purposes, and they were too ill informed to appreciate the value of carefully obtained and carefully digested statistics. The cultivator always professed his love for facts, but he did not care for any facts beyond those which he could glean for himself within the four corners of his own premises. For other people's facts he had a profound contempt. Improved education, and especially the stress of foreign competition, have altered this state of things.

The love of "facts" is as great as ever—nay, greater. It has happily grown so that no one is any longer satisfied with his own limited range, but extends his gathering ground as widely as he can. Moreover, with the progress of time has come a better appreciation of the proportion, and of the relative importance of facts. The causes of any particular depression, if not known in their entirety, are at least now known to be complex, and not to be attributable to any one cause, and therefore not remediable by any quick remedy, however plausible it may be in appearance.—Gardener's Chronicle.

Crinoline in the War.

"During the war the crinoline played a practical part, as many ladies were in the habit of hiding contraband articles under their skirts and in this manner smuggling them through the lines to the soldiers," said Al Conter of Denver at the Lindell. "I remember one instance of the kind of which I was a witness. I was a boy about 14 and with my mother was about to make a visit from Memphis to Grenada. We were detained at the guardhouse waiting for a passport for which we had an order when a richly dressed lady came in and presented a note from the commanding officer to pass her through the lines.

"She would have got through easy enough, but as she was leaving the station the band of her hoopskirt broke and it fell to the ground. The lady screamed and swooned dead away. Fastened to the skirt were a dozen pairs of fine cavalry boots, which she was endeavoring to smuggle through to Confederate soldiers. She was locked up and it was some time before friends secured her release. My mother was so badly frightened by the incident that she gave up the visit to Grenada, for she, too, had some contraband goods tied to her crinoline."—St. Louis Republic.

Some Amusing Blanders.

Mr. Wheatley hints that Scott, who makes David Ramsay swear "by the bones of the immortal Napier," may not have known what Napier's bones really were. Such a thought, as he admits, is "rank heresy," and he thinks it may be dissipated by a passage in "The Antiquary." When Mr. Gladstone said that Daniel alone could walk safely in the fiery furnace, Mr. Gladstone "put his foot into it" deep, like the art critic of The Times when he called Susannah "the chaste maiden."

There was a great blunder years ago in The Reader, when a reviewer handled as new a preface to a work by Dr. Johnson which was Dr. Johnson's own preface. He also erred who assailed some one for "always quoting French critics," when the work quoted was La Roche's text of Homer. La Roche was not a Frenchman.—London Saturday Review.

Slippery Tracks.

An electrical journal asks whether some one cannot discover a way to prevent the slipping of street car wheels, and thus remove a factor of danger in the operation of street cars, especially in winter. The cold and snowy rails are responsible for many of the collisions and other casualties which occur during the winter season. The motormen claim that the custom of sprinkling salt on the rails to melt the snow and ice thereon is a good one to that extent, but a bad one in that when the salt becomes crushed and pulverized it makes the rails slippery as before. In the meantime there is the chance of a fortune for the inventor who has the luck to hit on the right remedy.

Nearly Committed Murder In His Sleep.

Two persons had been out hunting and slept together at night. One of the hunters renewed the pursuit in his dreams, and when at last the fall of the stag came at the end of the chase he called with great ardor: "I'll kill him! I'll kill him!" The other hunter was awake, and leaping out of bed took position where he could see. The somnambulist hunter secured his knife and gave several stabs where a few seconds before his friend and companion lay.—"Hervy's Meditations."

When a Man is a "Muff."

The use of the word "muff," meaning a foolish, blundering person, has an easy explanation. A stupid youth was said to be a "muff" because, like the article of feminine wear called by that name, he held a woman's hand without squeezing it. The same old times were not without their gallantries.—Boston Transcript.

WHERE INDIANS WON'T VENTURE.

The Superstitious Mountains of Arizona and Their Wonders.

"Among the natural wonders of the great southwest are the Superstitious mountains, which loom up red and roseate from the arid desert to the east of the Salt river valley," said Ben Rogers, an old settler. "These mountains are so curious that as long as Arizona has been settled the Indians would have nothing to do with them. In consequence they are full of deer, ibex, bear and other wild game. It is tough work getting up in them, however, and because of this they are a natural fortress for wild game. Rising out of the level surface of the desert like the pyramids of Egypt are the Superstitious mountains.

"They reach a total height from the valley of from 3,000 to 3,500 feet, and probably their height above the sea is from 4,000 to 5,000 feet. There are no foothills leading up to them whatever. On one side is a valley as level as a billiard table, and on the other these lofty mountains rise. There are many theories for this, but no certain solution.

"On the crest of this unique range and in full view in the rarefied atmosphere for an immense distance from the plain are hundreds of queer figures, representing men in all attitudes. They represent ball throwers, outlooks, mere viewers of the country round about, men recumbent and contemplative, others starting on a foot race and in every conceivable posture and position. They are not real flesh and blood men, however—nothing but stone syenite—yet nothing can convince the Indians and some white men that they are not genuine. They say they are real mortals turned to stone, petrified by the peculiar condition of the air on the mountains.

"Now, you can induce an Indian to brave all the Gila monsters and rattlesnakes of the plain, but you can't induce him to try and scale that perpendicular range. He is satisfied to let alone the ancient abodes of the mysterious pygmies and the crests where the petrified men are, even though the mountains about are full of ibex and other game. It is a fine field for the naturalist and the antiquarian, for if they do not believe in the petrified men they will at least learn much of the pygmy cliff dwellers and the game that roams un molested near at hand."—San Francisco Examiner.

Scotch Way of Sweepling Witnesses.

After studying the section in a recent act of parliament entitling witnesses to claim to be sworn in Scotch fashion with the uplifted right hand instead of by kissing the book, the Rev. W. J. Jenkins of South Devonham wrote for information concerning the Scotch manner of taking the oath to the secretary for Scotland. It hardly the business of Sir George Trevelyan to answer such questions, but he has good naturally sent by the permanent under secretary of his department the terms of the Scotch judicial oath, which are, "I swear by almighty God, and as I shall answer to God at the great day of judgment, that I will tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, in so far as I know or as the same shall be asked of me."

This, says Sir Colin Scott Moncrieff, is the formula used by a witness when he is put upon his oath. He stands and with his right hand held up repeats these words after the judge or commissioner empowered to administer the oath.—London News.

Eggs of the Bob White.

Perhaps no bird in America, certainly no other in Hicigan, equals the common bob white or quail in the number of eggs it sets upon its nest, and even more are found in one nest, but I can assure the readers that with any other shaped eggs the bob white could never succeed as a successful setter. I will suggest that my friends with collections at hand compare a set of 20 eggs of the quail with 20 eggs of equal dimensions in longer and shorter diameter of any other species and observe which lot occupies the smaller space. We may say, for illustration, that the bob white's egg is triangular and fits in as no other egg, to my knowledge, can.—Dr. Morris Gibbs in Science.

Old Fashioned Business Methods.

Some business methods survive a long time even in New York, and the ancient custom of taking a young man in to learn an important mercantile business upon little or no salary still prevails. A college bred man, anxious to learn a certain wholesale business, found that his pay would be but $100 the first year, and at the end of five years he would hardly be able to pay his board out of his salary. The business has in it, however, the possibility of a fortune and the eventual certainty of a handsome income.—New York Sun.

Two Points of View.

"My dear, look down below," said Mr. Grandiose as he stood on the bridge with his wife and gazed at a tug hauling a long line of barges. "Such is life; the tug is like the man, working and toiling, while the barges, like women, are—"
"I know," interrupted Mrs. G. acridly; "the tug does all the barge-hauling, and the barges bear all the burden."—London Tit-Bits.

Animals and Smoking.

In the Berlin zoological gardens Professor Baul Meyerheim, a painter of animal life, has been trying the effects of the fragrant weed on various denizens of the gardens with results as novel as they are undoubtedly amusing. Chief among the subjects of his experiments was the brown bear. He declares that the "common brown bears" are genuine enthusiasts for tobacco.

"When I puff my cigar smoke into their cage," he remarks, "they rush to the front, rubbing their noses and backs against the bars through which the smoke has penetrated."

The professor, with some temerity, once experimented on the lion. The creature was asleep, and this was the moment selected for puffing a volume of tobacco smoke in his face. Did he at once wake up with a savage growl, lash his tail, and springing at the bar, shake the massive iron? Not at all. He awoke and "stood on his legs," which seems a natural enough attitude to adopt, and "smoked powerfully." Then he quietly lay down on his side and "gloried his nose for a second dose." It may be news to some to hear that goats, stags and llamas all devour tobacco and cigars with remarkable satisfaction.—Pearson's Weekly.

Minuteness of the Silkworm's Thread.

From careful and reliable experiments made by Professor Henry Newton, Dr. William Lutterworth and Miss Henrietta Rhodes, it appears that a 3-grain ball of silk as spun by the silkworm would, upon being unwound, measure 404 yards. At this rate a single pound of such thread would reach from the east end of the Eads bridge to the very northwest limits of the city of Omaha, and still there would be enough left to make a strong clothes line of regulation length. To be exact, a pound of such threads could be made to extend exactly 535 miles.

Reasoning from this same basis (404 yards to every three grains, dry weight), we find that enough of such threads could be stuffed into a coffee sack to reach around the world—47 pounds being sufficient! If the threads of some of the lesser spiders be used as a computation, the result is still more startling. The writer has heard a noted entomologist declare that enough of a certain kind of such webs to encompass the earth 11 times could be pressed into a common wineglass! Verily, there are little wonders as well as great ones.—St. Louis Republic.

An Impressionist Sketch.

One of the good deacons in a certain church is also the superintendent of the Sunday school, and although he is not an artist he frequently illustrates points in the lesson by the use of the blackboard. These exercises are for the special benefit of the younger portion of the school, and the superintendent has a habit of arousing the children's interest by asking questions about what he has drawn.

Having drawn the representation of a crown one Sunday, much after the stereotyped style of all such royal appendages, he said, "Now, what one of the little folks can tell me what this is?"

Several raised their hands, but the superintendent's eye was caught by a little fellow on the front seat.

"Well, Johnnie, you may tell."

Proud of his distinction above his fellows, the boy rose smilingly and shouted, "A pincushion!"—Boston Journal.

A Typical Purchase.

An American purchaser asked the advice of a distinguished French painter who was visiting New York as to what picture he should buy in a certain dealer's gallery. The Frenchman strongly recommended a picture by an American artist, the price of which was $300. But the name of the American artist was, we will say, Toodles. "Oh," said the patron of art, "I don't want to hang in my house a picture by a man named Toodles. Why not get that Lerolle over there? It's about the same size."

"But," said the French artist, "it is not so good as Toodles," and the price is $1,500.

"Never mind," replied the American magnate, "when I show the picture to my friends I want to be able to say it's a Lerolle—not a Toodles." And forthwith he bought the Lerolle at $1,500, against his foreign adviser's advice.—George Parsons Lathrop in Harper's.

Got Away From a Whale 90 Feet Down.

Captain Frederick P. Cornell, who died at his home in Warren, R. I., in the seventy-third year of his age, was a native of Dartmouth, Mass., and made several whaling voyages in command of New Bedford and Warren vessels. Once he was dragged down by a whale by a coil of rope encircling his leg. With presence of mind and pluck he drew his sheath-knife, and slashing it across his leg at the rope severed the latter with the second blow when 90 feet below the surface. This blow saved his life.—Martha's Vineyard Herald.

The Jersey Bodice.

It was for the Princess of Wales that the Jersey bodice was originally brought out, and when Mrs. Langtry wanted one of the glove fitting, seamless waists she couldn't get it. It was not until her royal highness tired of the snug bodice that the Jersey Lily could get it, though it came out finally under her name and patronage.—New York Times.

Fortunately he was too near the animal to receive very serious injuries.

The Stockton "Evening Mail" of Saturday, July 8th, contains five columns relating to the wonderful dredging operations going on in the immediate vicinity of the city of Stockton by the large dredger "Nevada," invented and owned by W. B. Pless. The paper also contains a life-like portrait of Mr. Pless. The "Empire," another large dredger, being built by the Pless Company, is receiving its finishing touches in Stockton channel and will be completed about the 1st of August. It is to cost $30,000. The Pless Dredging and Reclamation Company will soon erect a plant on Sonoma creek, near San Pablo bay, for the building of dredgers on a large scale. All these dredgers have monster compound buckets, which have a capacity of five cubic yards of dredgings and will lift and dump 600 cubic yards an hour.

FRANCISCO NICOLINI.

He is Not a Fit Subject For an Asylum.

Francisco Nicolini, aged 72 years, father of Florenzo Nicolini, more familiarly known as "Nick," was taken to Santa Rosa last Wednesday by Deputy Sheriff Sparks to be examined on a charge of insanity.

The complaint was sworn to by another son, Ben Nicolini, who resides with his brother and father on a mountain ranch four miles north of Sonoma.

The examination took place before Judge Dougherty. Ben said his father had threatened to kill him and others with an ax and a long knife, and had only been restrained with great difficulty; that while he was sound asleep his father was wandering about the house seeking whom he might slay.

The father, who could not speak a word of English, was examined by the aid of an interpreter and his answers proved him to be sound in mind. His testimony and that of others showed that he owned a little farm near Sonoma, but a few years ago gave it to his son Florenzo, who afterward gave an interest in it to Ben. The father went to live with Ben, and it is claimed that the latter has always hated his sire for giving his brother the farm.

On the witness stand the son admitted that he had choked his father once, and the evidence was to the effect that he drew a gun on him. Outside of the testimony of the son and one other witness there was not sufficient proof against the elder Nicolini's sanity, and the commission refused to send him to the asylum.

Leg Broken.

Fredinand Norborm, the nine-year-old son of P. G. Norborm, had his left leg broken above the knee last Wednesday afternoon by a portion of a stone fence falling upon him. It seems the poor little fellow was helping his father to build the fence when it suddenly gave away striking the boy on the leg as described above. Little Fredinand suffered greatly until the arrival of a physician, who promptly set the broken limb and made the child as comfortable as possible under the circumstances. Fredinand is well-known to the school children of Sonoma, where he attended school last term.

Death of Mrs. Millie Perkins.

Mrs. Millie Perkins, wife of R. E. Perkins, manager of Duhring's store, died at her home in this place last Monday, after an illness of several months. The deceased lady was the daughter of John Skinner, a pioneer of this valley, and was born in Sonoma 22 years ago. She leaves a husband, two little sons, a father and brother to mourn her early taking off. Mrs. Perkins' funeral was largely attended last Wednesday afternoon by the many friends of the bereaved family.

The Grammar School Graduates.

The graduates of the Sonoma Grammar Class of '93 successfully passed the recent examination held by the County School Board in Santa Rosa. Miss Claire Hope carried off the first honors by receiving 93 1/2 per cent. Ernest Campbell, Miss Ora Lawrence and Willie Clewe ranked next highest in their percentage. The following is a list of the graduates: Claire Hope, Ora Lawrence, Bertha Manuel, Annie Dunn, Ernest Campbell, Willie Clewe, Harry Knight, Lester Richmond and Skelton Glaister. These bright young people are deserving of enthusiastic praise from the public, for their honors have been honestly earned by hard and diligent work. Prof. A. C. Abshire and his assistant Miss Mandilla (Gingery) are to be congratulated on graduating so thorough and intelligent a class as that of 1893.

The Contemplated Railroad Connection.

Speaking about the contemplated railroad connection with Oregon via the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway an exchange says: "A railroad running from Ukiah through northern Mendocino, Humboldt and Del Norte counties, into Oregon, reaches the greatest area of valuable timber standing in one body in existence. The timber belt is from four to five hundred miles long, and extends from the coast in some places fifty miles. Its value in Humboldt county alone has been estimated at $1,500,000,000 (probably a low estimate), while the whole cannot be estimated. "These three counties can supply the United States with redwood lumber and shingles for years to come and the loss of timber be scarcely noticed. "These three counties will support thousands and thousands of people and when this rich empire is invaded by a connecting railroad between San Francisco and the systems north, will be among the most prosperous in California."

The Late Mrs. Akers.

Mrs. Stephen Akers, who died at her home in Schellville last week at the advanced age of 90 years, was a second cousin of William Penn. She was born in Virginia in 1802. In 1834 she was united in marriage to Judge Stephen Akers, also a native of Virginia. In 1850 she started overland with her husband for California, and in October of the same year she arrived in Sonoma Valley and located on a farm four miles south of Sonoma, where she lived continuously up to the day of her death. Grand-ma Akers, although an invalid for many years, bore her afflictions with true Christian fortitude. This good woman was known to almost every resident of this valley and by many throughout the county and her amiable character, her mild and affable manner and her unaffected goodness of heart had much endeared her to everyone that knew her. The recollections of those virtues, however, which caused her to be beloved whilst living, and which will preserve her memory in the hearts of those who survive her, serve to present to all the sorrow and distress which has visited them. Mrs. Akers leaves an aged husband, one son, Montgomery Akers and four daughters to mourn her death. The funeral took place last Sunday and was attended by a very large number of people, who came from all parts of the valley eager to pay this last mark of respect to the remains of a woman so universally beloved by all. The floral tributes sent by friends were both numerous, chaste and beautiful.

Military Tournament.

The San Francisco and North Pacific Railway Company has arranged to run an excursion to Healdsburg to-morrow (Sunday) to witness the knightly tournament by the First Troop of the State Militia. This troop has the reputation of being one of the best in the United States and many of the members are experts in cavalry exercises. This will be the first exhibition of the kind ever held in this part of the country. The programme will be highly interesting. There will be a mounted sword contest, jumping hurdles and cutting at heads, tug of war contest by six mounted men pulling from a center, vaulting horses, cavalry derby, chasing racette on horseback, wrestling on horseback, an obstacle race, an illustration of cavalry attack and charge. One fare will be charged for the round trip. All who can avail themselves of this opportunity and view this grand military tournament should do so.

A MAN WITH A BIG HEAD.

He Has Already Outlived Doctors Who Thought His Head Years Ago. This question about Ben Butler's enormous brain reminds me of an odd character who now resides in Washington—Lofus J. Parker, a man who has a natural case of "big head" that surpasses anything known in physiological or anatomical literature. Butler had 63 ounces of brain, but this man Parker surely has 100 ounces. If his skull is no thicker than that of the average man and the specific gravity of the thought matter contained therein is similar to that of the small headed varieties of the genus homo, then Mr. Parker will show a brain weight as much greater than that of Butler, Custer and other big brained men as theirs were greater than an every day Harrison Republican's.

Parker's head is simply enormous, measuring a fraction over 32 inches around, that of the "average man" being 11 inches smaller. Mr. Parker is a man of about 50 years of age. Twenty or 25 years ago three Washington physicians noticed the monstrous size of his brain pan and resolved to own it after Mr. Parker had no further use for it. They called him in one day and made known their desires. At that time he was a business man of the capital, not exactly as successful as the Stewarts, Drexels and Girards—still he was making a fair living.

These medics proposed to him that he retire on a bonus or subsidy which they would pay regularly if he would sign an agreement to the effect that they were to be the sole owners of his gigantic skull and contents after he had "shuffled off this mortal coil." An agreement was soon arrived at, and Parker retired on the "endowment" which was then and there set aside for his maintenance.

I understand that he has already outlived two of the physicians that made the proposal, and that the third is likely to lose all interest in the skulls before Parker relinquishes his right to what is known as "the biggest head in the world."—St. Louis Republic.

Salaries of Some Teachers.

By the way, the big new universities founded by Stanford and Rockefeller have done good work in the way of increasing the salaries of fine teachers. Dr. Jordan, who was Dr. Coulter's predecessor at Bloomington, gets a salary at the California college of $10,000 a year, besides a house and other extras, which are said to increase his total compensation to $15,000 a year. President Harper receives $10,000 a year, I have understood. Compared with the average stipend of a college professor, this seems munificent indeed.

Dr. Broadus, president of the big Baptist Theological seminary, is a scholar of international reputation, and yet his pay is paltry when his genius and learning are taken into consideration. I was told by a well informed Baptist a few years ago that the doctor got only $3,000 a year and his house rent. He may get more money now. Men who sit in college chairs are above mere monetary considerations. Still it is gratifying to know that a few receive the rewards to which their talents and culture entitle them.—Exchange.

A Puzzled Walter.

Some years ago a gentleman living in Charleston had as an attendant a colored man who was an excellent servant in all respects save one—he could not be taught to serve things invariably at the left hand of guests at the table.

At length the gentleman hit upon an ingenious expedient. "Coats were then worn single breasted in Charleston, and he told Caesar that he must always hand the plates and other dishes to the guests on the button-hole side.

This plan worked to a charm for some time, but one day there came a foreign guest who wore a double breasted coat. Poor Caesar in dismay looked first at one side of it and then at the other, and finally casting a look of despair at his master he exclaimed, "Buttons on both sides, massa," and handed the plate right over the gentleman's head.—Youth's Companion.

Cautions at the Poker Table.

Said the drummer who sells drugs: "I was sitting behind one of my customers who was in a poker game in a certain town that shall be nameless, save that it is situated in Indiana. Presently he 'skinned' his hand with the result of showing up four queens and an ace. When the draw came, he stood pat, and the result was that no one let against him. I asked him afterward why he did not draw one card and give the impression that he had but two pairs. 'I guess you don't know that gang,' said he. 'If I had a let that there ace get on to the table, somebody would have had four aces, sure.'"—Indianapolis Journal.

The Little Innocent.

Gertie's parents have staying with them on a visit an aunt whose charms are chiefly of an artificial character. The little girl would like to sleep with her, and her wish is gratified. Next morning Gertie comes running to her mamma in the greatest alarm. "Oh, mamma, I think I'd rather sleep with you, for, do you know, auntie takes to pieces."—Exchange.

The Buck and the Barbed Wire.

W. C. Green was coming across the country near Hereford, accompanied by others, when he came up with a large buck deer tangled up in the barbed wire of a neighboring fence. His horns were so completely tied up in the wire that it was with difficulty that they were extricated after a battle had ended his life. He had evidently struggled for many hours to regain his liberty.—Tombstone (A. T.) Prospector.

Don't Like the Weapons.

"I came very near having a duce once," said the congressman to a group of auditors. "Tell us about it," said they as one man. "When I was about thirty," he continued, "I hung out my shingle in a small town in a southern state, and being from the north I did not receive at first the agreeable recognition I expected. In fact there was one blatherskite of a fellow who made himself so obnoxious that one day I slapped his jaws. This brought all the respectable people of the community over to my side, and I was feeling pretty good for three or four days, when the bottom was knocked out of it all by my receiving a challenge from Mr. Blatherskite. If there was anything more than another that I didn't want to do it was to fight a duel, and I tried to get out of it some way, but couldn't, and finally accepted his challenge and chose double barreled shotguns at ten paces. I didn't hear anything from my man for twenty-four hours, and then I had a personal call from him. 'I have come in,' he said after a few preliminary remarks, 'to make a statement about this duel. What I've got to say is that shotguns are too dogged mortuary for me, and if you have no objections I'll apologize and call it square.' 'Then I became very brave and blustered some, but I accepted the situation very gracefully at last, and I ever after Mr. Blatherskite was most respectful and stood about as well in the town as he ever did.'—Detroit Free Press.

Why Milk Differs in Quality.

Milk is more susceptible to changes from the normal condition than any other food product. The first class changes have been brought about by the action of breeders. By many years of attention to breeding for fat production, it is now possible to get milk which may be twice as rich as the normal. On the other hand, other breeders have paid special attention to production of large quantity, even at the expense of quality, until pure milk is sometimes produced having as low as 10 per cent. of solids, when the normal is 13 per cent. A second set of causes which influence the quality of milk grows out of the irregularness or carelessness of the producer or collector. Where the persons held the exploded idea of the value of a cow's milk for children anything in the treatment of the cow which affects its nervous temperament may unfit it for food for very young children. Uncleanliness or neglect is often a grave source of trouble in the handling of milk, not only on account of the possibilities of the addition of visible filth, but because milk is peculiarly susceptible to a host of various kinds of bacteria and disease germs. Epidemics of scarlet fever and typhoid fever have been traceable to the milk supply, unclean cans and other utensils, and particularly to propagating bacteria.—Boston Transcript.

The Vanishing Couple.

A fashion sale to scamp a young girl in general society, but in all equipped with knowledge of good form is that of "vanishing" in company with her attendant after a dance and remaining in unfrequented corners until remark is thereby created. Such is the young woman whose chapters in social speculation as to her whereabouts or else in active exercise to find her. She is no doubt often the subject of conjecture to a large and mixed audience, but the better part of wisdom in a woman is to keep in view of her fellows. A witty Frenchwoman, Mme. de Girardin, once wrote: "Amuse yourself, O young beauties, but flatter your wings in the broad light of day. Avoid shadows in which suspicion hides." The "vanishing woman" act should be limited in performance to a platform in full view of the audience. The prompt return of a young woman to the side or vicinity of her chaperon after dancing is not only a graceful and well bred action, but affords an opportunity to the man, who too often is embarrassed in this respect, to withdraw and fulfill some other engagement.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Monday and Friday.

Those of us who like Friday for various reasons, but chiefly because it leads up to Saturday, upon which day schools are closed, will be pleased to hear that it is not half so unucky a day as Monday. The day school opens again. A German statistician, feeling that Friday had been a much maligned day, determined to make a scientific investigation of the matter, and found that it is not Friday but Monday that is the most unfortunate of the week days.

According to his investigations 16.71 per cent. of all accidents occur on Monday, 15.51 per cent. on Tuesday, 16.31 per cent. on Wednesday, 15.47 per cent. on Thursday, 16.23 per cent. on Friday, 10.33 per cent. on Saturday and only 2.93 per cent. on Sunday. So you see Friday isn't so bad a day after all.—Harper's Young People.
